Answer	This form has been utilised successfully for some years and has now had only minor changes to its content. It is usually completed when additional information will facilitate prescribing in primary care. This may be if the GP practice requests assurance of the need for ULM or where a specific brand or formulation is required. For example, if the patient has an allergy to an excipient, supply without the allergen is needed. This is commonly seen in paediatrics, where formulations without alcohol are preferred.
